

On Wednesday November 25,
two young men went to work on a construction site...

...they never came home.

Their deaths were preventable. If the company had followed safety protocols, they would still be alive.

Two young workers from Ireland, Joe McDermott, 24, and Gerry Bradley, 27 were tragically killed during a 'smoko' break on the Jaxon's Bennett street apartment project.

They had little or no training about construction safety in Australia, and that sadly is the case for many others.

Knowing your rights, being aware of dangers and having the confidence to speak out could save your life. And that is what a union helps you do.

The CFMEU is your local construction union, and we are committed to protecting your rights at work and ensuring every worker makes it home safely. Before you start working in construction in Australia, speak to us to make sure you're working on a safe site for a fair day's pay.

For more information contact Luke Collier
Email: lcollier@cfmeuwa.com
Mobile number: 0407 81 7413

Office number: [08] 9228 6900
Facebook: www.facebook.com/luke.collier.965
Twitter: twitter.com/lcollier31